Kindergarten crams schools

Full-day classes. Space crunch causes schools to redraw boundaries, move out grades

Five years ago, the Grade 6 students at Crescent Town elementary were relocated to another school to make room for the extra classrooms needed to meet the government's 20-student class cap in the primary grades.

Last fall, the Grade 5s were sent to yet a different school to free up space for full-day kindergarten at the school, near Victoria Park subway station.

Struggling to find space for full-day kindergarten, which will be fully implemented in 2014, has prompted school boards to look at redrawing boundaries, busing older students to different schools and adding portables.

It's a complicated situation, and full-day kindergarten "is just a continuation of provincial 'bright ideas' without consultation or a sense of cause and effect," said Toronto Trustee Sheila Cary-Meagher, who represents Beaches-East York.

In her ward, the space crunch at Crescent Town affected several nearby schools

Now, other schools that will get full-day this year or next are also looking for solutions: Kew Beach may sell off land to fund an addition, and then swap land owned by the board for a city-owned park behind the school to make up for the loss of play space.

Others will probably get portables or prefabricated additions, considered cheaper than proper bricks-and-mortar construction.

The government has provided $1.4 billion for schools across the province for renovations and additions for full-day. But the money isn't enough for all the schools that need construction. School boards say they've been told to come up with low-cost options, and some have even considered off-site spaces.

Apart from the shortfall in construction funds, the Toronto board alone is spending $15 million more on staffing and programming for full-day than the government is providing, Cary-Meagher added.

Toronto Trustee Howard Goodman, who has five schools currently under review for boundary or other changes, said communities find those options "highly disruptive."

"Full-day kindergarten is a really good program — I think it has education and societal value," he said, but the problem began back when the province introduced the 20-student class cap in classes from junior kindergarten to Grade 3. It ate up roughly 10 per cent of school space — almost the exact amount required by full-day, added Goodman.

Co-operation key to transit: Murray

Interview. New transportation minister speaks to Metro about the city's frustrations with transit projects

JESSICA SMITH
jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Ontario's new transportation minister lives in Toronto, rides the TTC and cracks dark jokes about dodging falling concrete from the Gardiner Expressway.

Minister Glen Murray says transportation in the GTA has reached a "critical" point and the province needs financial tools to fund transit and ease gridlock.

The Big Move — Metrolinx's transportation plan that includes building the Sheppard East LRT, the Etobicoke-Finch West LRT and the Eglinton-Scarborough Crosstown line — was signed off on by the city last year, but how to dig up $40 billion of the project's total cost has not yet been decided. Possible solutions — including road tolls or congestion taxes — are politically sensitive.

During the Liberal leadership campaign, many of the leadership hopefuls talked about making Metrolinx more powerful as a way to end "political gridlock." Murray said if made premier, he would "upload some or all of the local transit authorities' responsibilities to Metrolinx."

Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak is advocating for the province to upload subways and major highways to the province's jurisdiction in order to get things done.

On Thursday, Metro interviewed Murray to find out how far he'll go to get Toronto the transit and transportation system it needs.

Ontario Transportation Minister Glen Murray CARLOS OSORIO/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Quoted

"I live half a block from the Gardiner, so the pastime in the neighbourhood is to try to get under it without a piece of it falling off. That's a monument to the challenge of infrastructure repair and renewal."

Minister Glen Murray, on Toronto's transportation frustrations.

The talk during the Ontario Liberal leadership campaign about giving Metrolinx more power, what are your current thoughts on this issue?

I don't think it's about giving Metrolinx more power, I think it's about improving our planning process so we can optimize routing and strengthen the relationship between our transportation and transit planning … and ways to fund transit and transportation, and developing the financial tools we need to sustain transportation in the GTHA.

Do you have any ideas about what can be done to get around "political gridlock"?

I think we have to integrate the planning of our highways with the planning of our transit system. They go together …

I'm not sure that answered the question. Can you really build transit in Toronto without fixing the systemic political problems that keep leading to cancelled (transit) plans?

The Big Move has not been cancelled. It's been moving ahead. We've gone through a change in mayors and we've maintained the plan … I'm pretty confident that we can get a lot of progress and I'm very confident that that progress will accelerate as we go forward.

Who's line is it anyway?

The responsibility for transit has shifted in the last year when Metrolinx agreed to build 4 projects, which Metrolinx will own, but the TTC will operate:

- Sheppard East LRT
- Etobicoke-Finch West LRT
- Eglinton Crosstown LRT
- Replacement of the Scarborough RT

What will happen to The Big Move if, when Metrolinx comes back with a report with suggestions for revenue tools (in May), you can't bring about an agreement to institute any of them?

I think we will come to an agreement. I think (there's a) need to make sure that we have congestion-free highways and roads and user-friendly transit that connects people to their jobs and their schools and reduces the amount of time that people spend in their cars, when they'd rather spend it with their families doing things.

If you find yourself in a situation where city council gets in the way of The Big Move or other transportation plans, how much of the province's power would you be willing to use to make sure the city gets the transit and transportation that it needs?

I don't think that will be necessary. I have a very good relationship with city councillors … I have huge respect for our civic leaders and I think one of the reasons I'm in this job is the respect I have for those civic leaders and to work with them to make sure we don't need to be heavy-handed as a government.

Whitby shooting leaves 4 wounded

Police say they are fielding tips from the public but have no suspect description yet after a man was critically wounded and three others seriously injured in a shooting at an apartment building east of Toronto.

Durham police Sgt. Nancy Van Rooy says shots rang out around 12:30 p.m. Thursday inside the highrise at 101 White Oaks Court in Whitby.

Police say a 19-year-old man was critically wounded and airlifted to a Toronto hospital trauma centre while the three other men were taken to a nearby hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

The commission said Thursday it is re-examining whether Livent founders Garth Drabinsky and Myron Gottlieb, along with ex-vice-president of finance Gordon Eckstein, contravened the securities act and the "public interest" when they manipulated the books at the theatre production company. MANAGING SUBWAY DELAYS REQUIRES BETTER, MORE TIMELY INFO TO CUSTOMERS

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Last week saw a disruption on the Yonge Line when we experienced problems near Lawrence Station.

This incident occurred just as the afternoon rush hour was building and it meant that we had to suspend train movement between Eglinton and York Mills stations while crews accessed the tunnel to fix the problem.

Given the time of day, it was inevitable that a lot of customers would be affected, so a number of TTC executives and I left our offices at Davisville Station to go and assist with crowd control and customer service.

I'm glad that I went because I saw (and heard) firsthand how frustrating such a disruption is for customers and how we, at the TTC, need to get better at providing useful, timely information about alternative services, such as buses.

When such problems occur, we normally call for a bus shuttle to be implemented. This takes time because we have to divert buses from routes that are near to where the emergency is occurring. While this is happening, the number of inconvenienced customers builds. We dispatch additional staff to the affected location(s) as soon as possible to assist and provide direction.

Many other transit networks have much higher station staffing levels than we do here and many have better aids, such as station-based closed-circuit television cameras to enable effective incident management. At the TTC, we are in the throes of making improvements in both these areas, but in the meantime we are looking at measures we can take right now to handle disruptions more effectively and to keep you better informed.

Being on-site at Eglinton, I was at least able to personally say sorry to a number of delayed customers, but to everyone else that was affected, please accept our apologies.

SUBWAY MUSICIAN PASSES

Well-known TTC subway musician Achilla Orru passed away on Feb. 4 at the age of 53.

Achilla was born in Uganda, and came to Canada in 1989. Achilla lost his sight as a young boy and learned to play the thumb piano.

He entertained subway customers for 10 years, often playing at Bloor-Yonge station.

He will be missed.

HAPPY 50TH BIRTHDAY TO THE UNIVERSITY LINE

FEELING CONGESTED? THE CITY WANTS TO KNOW

Fact: Transportation planning is fundamental to creating a world-class city.

Fact: Traffic congestion in the GTA is in crisis and something has to be done.

Fact: To build and pay for the infrastructure necessary to overcome Toronto's traffic dilemma, taxpayers need to pay attention.

Through its Feeling Congested? campaign, the City of Toronto continues to engage residents in conversations about transportation policies in its Official Plan, which includes long-term transportation planning and new funding strategies.

Feedback received will be presented to City Council, which will then be shared with Metrolinx. The ultimate goal of the city's campaign is to provide greater clarity to public- and private-sector partners on the direction of the city's transportation infrastructure investment and how to fund it.

The city is encouraging everyone to join the conversation. For more information, visit feelingcongested.ca and take the survey; follow on Twitter @congestedTO or on Facebook at facebook.com/feelingcongested; email feelingcongested@toronto.ca; or sign up to receive e-updates from the City at toronto.ca (check the "Official Plan" box).

Look for the City of Toronto's Feeling Congested? poster campaign in all TTC vehicles and on Platform Video Screen in the subway system. Fill out an online survey and have a chance to win a one-month TTC Metropass and other prizes.

Metrolinx sound walls prove controversial

Residents near the Georgetown GO corridor say that a Metrolinx plan to build five-metre-high noise walls along the future route of the Union Pearson Express threatens to cast an ugly shadow across their neighbourhoods.

"They're just a huge blight, and they're going to stretch for miles across the city. You think, five metres — that's 16 feet. They're massive," said Kevin Putnam, a member of the Junction Triangle Rail Committee, who can see the railway tracks from his home's second storey.

Quoted

"Most people who live south of Eglinton whose property backs onto the tracks would prefer to get them. North of Eglinton, most people would probably prefer not to have them."

Simon Chamberlain, Mount Dennis Community Association

The walls, which will range from 3.5 to five metres high, are supposed to be effective in blocking out noise within 200 metres of the tracks, he said. Beyond that, they're useless.

Pan Am Games visitors will ride the Union Pearson Express through a canyon of graffiti, Putnam warned.

But community representatives say some residents, particularly those with property beside the tracks, see the noise walls as a matter of survival.

"Within our own community there are deeply divided opinions," said Simon Chamberlain, of the Mount Dennis Community Association. "Those who are opposed have trouble seeing why anyone would want them.

Putnam worries that the noise walls will attract graffiti and block the view of those walking in the vicinity. He fears they will also cast a shadow on the newly planted West Toronto Railpath park.

Jade Smith says she had an amazing time at the new Legoland Discovery Centre at Vaughan Mills on Thursday. JEFF SMITH/METRO

Discovering Legoland one block at a time

Laying bricks. The classic brand's new toy wonderland put to the test by 9-year-old

JADE SMITH
Age 9

I feel very lucky to be one of the first people to visit the new Legoland Discovery Centre at Vaughan Mills, a big mall just north of Toronto. When I walked in I was surrounded by brightly coloured Lego everywhere, and I felt like a real Lego person. Everything came to life — it was amazing.

In the first room I entered, I learned how Lego blocks are made. First you mix plastic pellets, then you heat them up, and then you mould them. You can also weigh yourself in Lego. I weigh 31,500 bricks.

Next, I walked through the City of Toronto and Niagara Falls — all made out of Lego. Everything looked so realistic I felt like I was a giant walking through the cities. There was a model of the ROM, city hall, downtown skyscrapers and even the airport. I was told it took 1.5 million bricks and 5,000 hours to build the 30 buildings in the Lego city.

Once I came out of the city, there was a huge life-size Lego Friends house. I made a Lego cake. There were play pits filled with Lego, where you could build anything that you can imagine. There was a station where you built a tower and when you turned the dial an earthquake shook your tower to try and make it fall over. Mine was sturdy — it did not fall. There was one spot where you could make your own car and race it down a ramp or a steep track.

I couldn't believe that there were rides in the Legoland Discovery Centre. On one ride the faster you pedalled the higher you went. There was also a ride where you tried to save a princess by shooting lasers at bricks, skeletons and trolls. There was a 4D Lego movie and at one point the characters are fighting with the rock monster and you feel like you're getting sprayed with ice just like in the movie.

I really enjoyed my time there. It was so much fun I'd love to go back for another visit!

That's a lot of bricks

Legoland Discovery Centre Toronto is a 34,000-square-foot indoor attraction featuring more than three million Lego bricks, geared towards children ages 3-10 and their families.

Childhood obesity.
Couple's work battling rare illness catches Michelle Obama's eye

They will continue to walk until their children are no longer hungry.

That's the final line in the video about a rare genetic disease that causes children to eat constantly because they don't know when they're full. Set to inspirational music, the video has helped draw attention to Prader-Willi Syndrome (PWS) and the One Small Step campaign, which is raising research funds to find a cure.

The video caught the eye of Michelle Obama, and the Etobicoke family behind it has been invited to the White House on March 6 to meet the U.S. First Lady and discuss solutions to the epidemic of childhood obesity.

One big step

"Without the awareness you don't get funding, and without funding you don't get research."
Tanya Johnson, of One Small Step

"We're thrilled," said Tanya Johnson, who started the annual walks in 2005 with her husband, Keegan, after their son Dante was diagnosed with PWS.

"People are quick to judge when they see someone who's overweight ... but if they're bound by genetics, that's not fair," she said.

One Small Step, which started as a single walk in Mississauga that raised $50,000 for PWS research, has grown into an event that takes place in 65 cities across the continent and has secured more than $3 million in donations.

Canadians play hard at home and abroad: Survey

Do you take at least one vacation per year? Are international destinations of most interest to you? Are you often considering "staycation" activities for your friends and family? If so, you are clearly not alone.

Play TaxiMedia, a Canadian-based media company with a national network of touchscreens in taxicabs, surveyed more than 8,000 riders across the country, and found that riders incorporate both travel and local activities into their annual vacation plans.

When booking vacations, 70 per cent of riders indicated that they take between one and five vacations per year, with 75 per cent opting to travel to Mexico and other international destinations.

Staycation plans rank high as well with 75 per cent of people booking outings for both themselves and for others. Finally, close to 50 per cent spend more than $100 per outing for each individual, with dining and visiting city attractions ranking as the most popular outings. PLAY TAXIMEDIA

India. Police search for men accused of raping and killing three sisters

Indian police said Thursday they have launched a manhunt for men suspected of raping and killing three sisters, aged 5 to 11, in the latest case of sexual violence to grip the country.

The sisters' bodies were found in a village well in Maharashtra state on Feb. 14 after they had gone missing from school, police officer Javed Ahmed said. The area is more than 1,000 kilometres south of New Delhi, the capital.

As the victims' mother accused police of a shoddy investigation, enraged villagers forced shops to close, burned tires and blocked a national highway passing through the area for several hours on Wednesday, demanding justice.

One police officer has been suspended for not acting promptly, said Indian Heavy Industries Minister Praful Patel. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new law enacted by the Indian government has increased the sentences for rape from the existing seven to 10 years to a maximum of 20 years. It also provides for the death penalty in extreme cases of rape that result in death or leave the victim in a coma.

New detective takes over Pistorius murder case

Sensational twist. Prosecutors say timing of murder charges against detective leading investigation 'totally weird'

Ahead of a judge's decision on whether to release Oscar Pistorius on bail, South African police on Thursday appointed a new chief detective in the murder case, replacing a veteran policeman who is himself charged with attempted murder.

The sensational twist in the state's troubled investigation fuelled growing public fascination with the case against the double-amputee Olympian, who is charged with premeditated murder in the shooting death of his girlfriend, Reeva Steenkamp, in the early hours of Valentine's Day.

Much of the drama Thursday, however, happened outside the courtroom as South African police scrambled to get their investigation on track.

The decision to put police Lt. Gen. Vinesh Moonoo in charge came soon after word emerged that the initial chief investigator, Hilton Botha, is facing attempted murder charges, and a day after he offered testimony damaging to the prosecution.

Police say they found out about it after Botha testified in Pistorius' bail hearing Wednesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Discrepancies

- Botha acknowledged Wednesday in court that nothing in Pistorius' version of the fatal shooting of Steenkamp contradicted what police had discovered, even though there have been some discrepancies.
- Botha also said that police had left a 9 mm slug in the toilet and had lost track of allegedly illegal ammunition found in Pistorius' home.

Canada Innovates

Part 3

The final part of Metro's series on Canadian innovation may include some failed ideas, but could we have a winner when it comes to today's design?

You'll notice highlighted words in the text. These are words we feel are important to understanding the stories and may help you digest their meaning a little bit easier.

Find out from Calgary's mayor what makes a city successful and innovative at metronews.ca/naheednenshi

A DRAGON'S EYE VIEW

Entrepreneur and TV personality Arlene Dickinson weighs in on Canada's innovation inertia

ROBSON FLETCHER
Metro in Calgary

The 2008 recession put a damper on innovation in Canada, says Arlene Dickinson of Dragons' Den, and while things are now "turning a corner," she believes the country still has a long way to go.

"Other places have been innovating at a rapid speed, and we haven't been putting as much time and attention into it," Dickinson told Metro in a recent interview.

"My concern about the state of innovation is that it's lagging behind."

The problem, according to the high-profile investor and businesswoman, is not a lack of entrepreneurial spirit in Canada.

Quite the contrary, in fact.

"You think about Dragons' Den and the number of entrepreneurs in the country that are coming forward — I think we are being very entrepreneurial," Dickinson said.

"But that's kind of a new phenomenon. That's happened in the last three or four years as we come out of a bad economy, because that's what's going to drive a new economy."

The sticking point for many of these would-be innovators is going from concept to commercialization.

As an example, she pointed to the "3-D Sawhorse" — an innovative hardware product developed in the garage of 82-year-old Sam Koffski, which Dickinson snapped up on Season 6 of Dragons' Den.

Falling behind

"Other places have been innovating at a rapid speed, and we haven't been putting much time and attention into it."
Venture Communications CEO Arlene Dickinson

The elderly entrepreneur had a great idea on his hands, Dickinson said, but struggled finding the effective financing, patents, manufacturing and distribution.

With a little help, though, that soon changed, and the product could hit retail shelves by the spring.

"It's about to go into stores, hopefully, across the world," Dickinson said. "Sometimes what great ideas need is just somebody to open the doors and also to put the weight behind the idea to make it successful."

On a broader scale, Dickinson said Canada needs to change its mentality when it comes to innovation and make it a large part of the national discourse.

"We have to start talking about it more, making it part of the conversation of business in this country," she said. "If we don't, we're going to be in trouble. We're going to be left behind, absolutely."

Canada's closet of colossal failures

With great ideas come great failures, and Canada has had plenty of failures. But that's really no surprise given Canadians' entrepreneurial spirit.

Tom Villemaire is the co-author of Colossal Canadian Failures, a short history of things that seemed like a good idea at the time and an ode to Canada's innovative spirit gone haywire. Metro spoke with him about why failure is an important step in the innovative process.

In terms of innovation, where exactly did most of these ideas fail?

A lot of these so-called failures were victims of timing — they were good ideas but out of synch with the times. Some were marketing failures — the consumers just weren't convinced of the potential. Others were situations where the inventor was the victim of backers who lost confidence too early or got greedy. And some were just weird. George Kavanaugh's idea to use carrots for rectal treatment (with a recess in the carrot for medication) was really an odd idea from the start. And the idea of a perpetual motion machine made from wood — which, as we all know, creates sparks when two pieces of it are rubbed together and which, as we all know, burns very easily — was just plain wrong.

What was the best idea that went wrong? Why? And could it have worked if the situation was different?

Well, there are a few contenders, but I think ultimately it has to be the Avro Arrow — a supersonic, all-weather jet fighter that did very well in test flights with pilots.

But like almost every other government project, the costs were significantly higher than had been initially estimated ($1.5 million to $400 million to $700 million). The Liberals were in power when the Arrow was built and had to defend the expense. When John Diefenbaker's Conservatives defeated the Liberals in 1957, it took them under two years to cancel the Arrow program.

Were these mostly bad ideas or were they just developed wrong?

Some were bad ideas from the start, but in a lot of other cases, the inventors — or their backers — just lacked the self-confidence or resources to follow something through. Two guys from Toronto had a working light bulb before Thomas Edison. They couldn't raise money to develop it so they sold the patent to Edison, who was working on something similar and just rolled their idea into the mix.

Would you still call these inventors innovators, just because they were willing to try something new and different?

Many of these people were innovators and were brilliant. Not all, however. Samuel Hughes was a Conservative minister in charge of getting Canada ready for the First World War. Among his other questionable decisions, he registered a patent in his secretary's name for a new and improved shovel and ordered the shovels for his troops. In fact, the soldiers needed shovels to dig the foxholes and trenches that would help protect them in battle. But Hughes' secretary suggested they could use the shovels as shields and put holes in them so the soldiers could shoot from behind them. A shovel with a hole in it just isn't the most effective shovel.

Has Canada learned from these mistakes?

I think Canada has learned a little, but there are still plenty of Canadians who head south to "make it big," and that is a symptom of a problem. And some might say Canada doesn't always have the confidence and boldness to support its inventors and innovators.

Can future innovators learn from them?

I think future innovators can draw inspiration from even the failures. Anyone who wants to try something new is daring to break new ground. That's a scary thing. Failure and doing something new are roommates; they're twins. You can't have one without the other. Even Alexander Graham Bell had failures — like the Cygnet II, a plane he designed with wings created from a wall of kites. At the time, there was nothing that had enough power to get the plane airborne in the first place. But he's not remembered for that; he's remembered for his successes.

How do you see Canada in terms of innovative thinking these days?

We have pretty amazing technology people in Canada. You look at the BlackBerry and the Canadarm and even the arms industry with the LAV3 or Stryker. High-tech means high pay and good jobs, so it's important to keep that kind of thing in the country.

Ashley Smith was emaciated, hurt, dirty in prison: Mother

Last look alive. Inquest hears of teen's ragged condition months before her death in jail

The mother of a teenager who killed herself in her prison cell recalled how years of segregation appeared to diminish her daughter.

In a harrowing account of the last time she saw her daughter alive, Coralee Smith described her shock at Ashley's appearance during a visit in the summer of 2007.

"Oh Mom, my skin is all loose," Ashley told Smith through the Plexiglas screen that separated them.

"She was not a 19-year-old girl at that point; she was aged," an emotional Smith told an inquest jury. "She was a lot smaller."

Four guards at the Nova Institution for Women in Truro, N.S., had brought Ashley into the interview room, her mom recounted.

She was in handcuffs, shackles and dressed in a security gown aimed at preventing suicides. Her hair looked dirty.

Ashley had an injured eye — apparently caused by choking herself.

"When you come home, we'll take you to an optometrist," Smith told her daughter.

Smith, 65, of Moncton, N.B., who travelled far to visit her daughter, said she never knew about Ashley's self-harming behaviour or lengthy segregation stints.

Asked what they talked about, Smith said, "Coming home."

At the end of the visit, Smith put her hand to the screen, but Ashley appeared reluctant.

"I watched them take her down the hall," Smith said. "It was the last time I saw Ashley alive."

A few months later, after yet another prison transfer, Ashley choked herself to death at the Grand Valley Institution in Kitchener. Guards, ordered not to intervene, watched.

After learning of her child's death, Smith called Eric Broadbent, a correctional manager.

Broadbent, who once promised Smith he would look after Ashley, was among managers who berated guards for going into her cell to remove ligatures. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton. Murder added to parents' charges after alleged abuse of twin girls

An Edmonton couple charged with starving and abusing their young twins are facing murder charges.

Paramedics were called last May to a home where they found the two-year-old girls suffering from injuries and severe malnourishment.

One of the girls, known in court documents as M, spent the next three months in a coma virtually brain dead.

She died shortly after the Supreme Court of Canada refused to interfere with an earlier court ruling allowing doctors to remove her from a ventilator.

Her sister and an older brother were placed in foster care.

The parents are to appear in court Friday on the new charges: Second-degree murder and criminal negligence causing death.

They still face original charges of aggravated assault, criminal negligence causing bodily harm and failing to provide the necessities of life.

Las Vegas killing causes pileup, fire, more deaths

Police rope off the scene of a shooting and multi-car accident on the Las Vegas Strip early Thursday. Authorities say at least one person in a Range Rover shot at people in a Maserati that then crashed into a taxi. The cab burst into flames, and the driver and passenger were killed. The male driver of the Maserati also died, and his passenger was shot. STEVE MARCUS, LAS VEGAS SUN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California

Feds face test of gay-marriage talk

The Obama administration is considering urging the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn California's ban on gay marriage.

The administration faces heightened expectations from gay-rights supporters after President Barack Obama, who only last year came out with his support, has become far more vocal in his second term.

His administration has a week to file a brief outlining its opinion on the California ban, known as Proposition 8. While it is unlikely to sway the high court, the government's opinion does carry weight with the justices.

Opponents of the ban believe the president signalled his intentions when he declared in last month's inaugural address that homosexuals must be "treated like anyone else under the law."

Winnipeg

Former Scouts leader admits to sexual abuse

A former leader with Scouts Canada has pleaded guilty in Winnipeg to several sex charges involving minors.

Stuart Garrett Young, 40, has admitted to sexual assault, sexual exploitation, making child pornography and other offences.

His sentencing hearing is set for April 15.

Young was a longtime volunteer with Scouts Canada and helped run an outdoor program for kids 14 to 17 years old.

At the time of his arrest last summer, police alleged Young had abused one of his victims from 2009 to 2011.

Young was suspended from Scouts Canada as soon as the group became suspicious of him and notified police.

Protesters hope to send Morsi to the moon

Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi GETTY IMAGES FILE

An Egyptian opposition group has made a novel protest against President Mohammed Morsi by signing him up for a chance to win a trip to space.

The April 6 Youth Movement said on its Facebook page Thursday that it had entered the Islamist leader's name in the contest because it wanted to be rid of him. It called on supporters to vote for the president.

There was no immediate response from the president's press office to an email seeking comment.

"For sure, no one in the universe can put up with blatant lies, reneging on promises except for the brotherly people of the moon," the group wrote on its post.

"It is for this reason that the president needs your votes. President Morsi, we wish you safe travels."

April 6 was a driving force behind the 2011 uprising that toppled Hosni Mubarak's regime. Many of its supporters backed Morsi in the June 2012 election he narrowly won to become Egypt's first freely elected president.

But later, the group became among the fiercest critics of the president and his Muslim Brotherhood, the fundamentalist group from which he hails. The opposition accuses Morsi of monopolizing power and going back on campaign promises to have an inclusive government and introduce far-reaching reforms.

Morsi's supporters say the new government cannot immediately fix years of neglect and poor administration from Mubarak's 29-year rule.

Scusi! We were too tough on Italian menu: Quebec gov't

French-language laws. Quebecers joked about how they would never relinquish their right to eat pasta after spat

The Quebec government says its language watchdog was a little too aggressive in chasing after an Italian restaurant for excessive use of Italian on its menu.

The provincial minister responsible for language says she realizes the agency went too hard after the Montreal restaurant Buonanotte.

"I recognized that there was an excess of zeal," Diane De Courcy told reporters Thursday in Quebec City.

Speaking more generally, she said similar mistakes wouldn't be made in the future. She said the Office Québécois de la langue française (OQLF) would be more careful to use a loophole in the application of the language law that offers some leeway for foreign cultural and food products.

"Not that there's ever a 100 per cent guarantee — these are human beings doing these inspections," De Courcy said.

It's an abrupt reversal of roles for the Parti Quebecois government — which has spent years, since its days in opposition, urging the Office to apply the law more strictly.

The organization has even received a 6 per cent budget increase this year, to $24.7 million. The agency recently visited the Montreal eatery after receiving a citizen's complaint, and it agreed that certain words on the menu needed to be switched to French.

Among them: "pasta" and "calamari." They did leave the word "pizza" alone.

The incident also encouraged other business owners to go public with their disputes with the OQLF. One included a British-style fish and chips restaurant that said it was being forced to lose the "fish and chips." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Incident draws ridicule

"I don't think the future of French will be determined by Italian menus, or Japanese sushi."

Dot your Zs and stroke your Ls. Polish language too complex for keyboards

Polish language experts launched a campaign Thursday to preserve the challenging system of its diacritical marks, saying the tails, dots and strokes are becoming obsolete under the pressure of IT and speed.

The drive, initiated by the state-run Council of the Polish Language, is part of the UNESCO International Mother Language Day. The campaign's Polish name is complicated for a non-Polish keyboard: "Je,zyk polski jest a,-e,."

That's a pun meaning that Polish language needs its tails and is top class. Part of the meaning is lost and the pronunciation sounds wrong if the marks aren't there.

Computer and phone keyboards require users to punch additional keys for Polish alphabet. To save time, Poles skip the nuances. As part of the new campaign, radio and TV stations are playing songs with words stripped of diacritical pronunciation, making them sound odd to the Polish ear. A rap song concludes: "Press the right Alt sometimes" to obtain Polish letters, referring one of the keyboard buttons that Poles need to press to write characters with diacritical marks. Light-sabre classes teach Star Wars fans to feel the force

San Francisco. Ever wanted to put 'Jedi' on your resumé? This workshop will give you the requisite moves

A group of San Francisco Star Wars fans have created a combat choreography class for Jedis-in-training with their weapon of choice: the light sabre.

At a recent class, Alain Bloch, the self-proclaimed Jedi Master at Golden Gate Knights, demonstrated a slicing technique. He has a background in martial arts and stage combat.

"Always be mindful of the presence!" he said, donning a Luke Skywalker outfit and a green light sabre.

With Star Wars movie music coursing through the dance studio, his disciples clutch their neon-glowing light sabres.

These self-proclaimed Star Wars geeks slice and parry as they follow Bloch's lead, and they get a little exercise, too.

People in a recent class, including a couple on a date, said they embraced their quirkiness and had even converted some of the skeptical into the Jedi order.

"At first they giggle because they think it's a little silly. Then they're like, 'Actually that's kind of cool,'" said Julio Reyes, a student. Not all Jedis-in-training are rooting for the good guys. Some came to embrace the dark side of the force.

"I just love Vader, period," said the Darth Vader-clad student Gary Ripper. "Just his voice, the way he moved, the power of him. I just liked the powerfulness of him."

TV. Nielsen to measure broadband audiences

The company that measures television viewership said Thursday it will soon begin counting people who watch programming through broadband in addition to the traditional broadcast or cable hook-up.

Nielsen's move is a significant step toward recognizing a world where the definition of TV viewing is swiftly changing and toward satisfying clients concerned that the company isn't keeping up with those changes. Separately, Nielsen is developing ways to track content on tablets and mobile phones.

For many years, roughly 99 per cent of homes in the U.S. had televisions that received service through broadcast, cable or satellite signals.

Now the number of homes without such service is 4.2 per cent — and growing each year. An estimated three-quarters of those homes still have TVs, and their owners watch programming through game consoles or services like Netflix and Amazon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toys. Lego gets sales boost from girly product lineup

Lego's sales soared 25 per cent last year thanks in part to its new series of building blocks designed for girls.

The privately owned company said Thursday that on revenue of about $4.2 billion its net profits grew 38 per cent, to about $1 billion.

The company, based in western Denmark, said the Lego Star Wars and Lego Ninjago series remained among the more popular, but it was a novel roll-out for girls, Lego Friends, that sold better than expected — to the extent that production units were unable to keep pace with demand. The line, which includes mini-figures in pink, a dream house with a pool, and a beauty shop, drew some criticism for reinforcing gender stereotypes. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

M&M'S® SPOKES CANDIES CALL IT QUITS!

Red and Yellow shock fans with resignation letter.

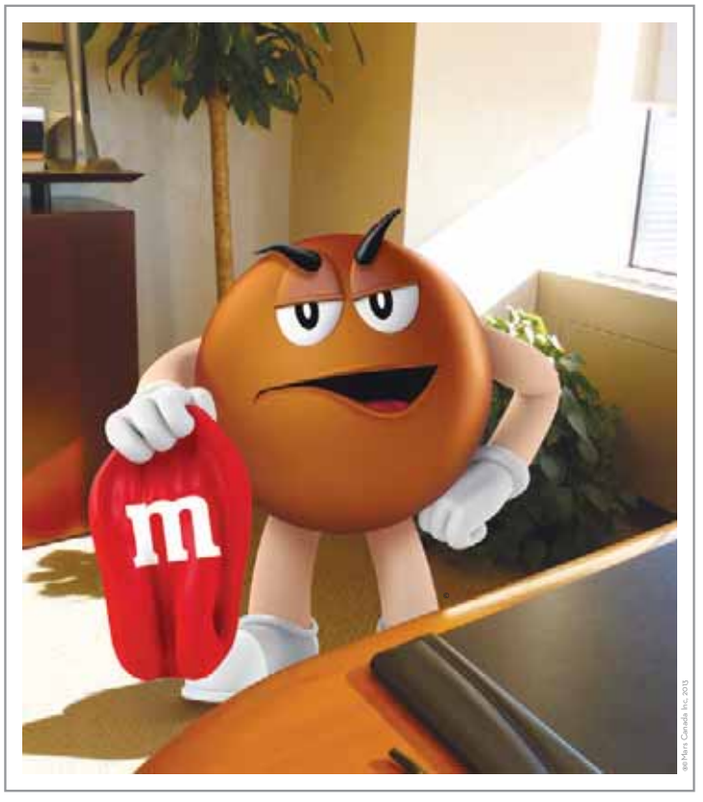
Milk chocolate lovers across the country today are mourning the loss of M&M'S iconic spokes candies Red and Yellow, following Tuesday's public announcement that they are hanging up their 'M's' and parting ways with the M&M'S team immediately to avoid being eaten.

"Those two have been with us for almost 60 years, so it came as a real shock" said M&M'S Chief Chocolate Officer Ms Brown, following the leak of Red and Yellow's resignation letter to the press on Friday. "But don't forget – the rest of us M&M'S spokes candies deal with the same problem everyday. Worse, I always get people smirking at me because they think I'm naked!" she continued.

The rant-filled resignation letter – which can be read in its entirety on facebook.com/mmscanada and on twitter @mmscanada – is quite abrasive and aggressive, complicating the possibility of any reconciliation. In their letter, the former spokes candies cite their daily fear of being eaten, among other things, as the main reason for resigning – going so far as to blame Canadians for their untamed love of milk chocolate.

Most M&M'S fans have been reacting to their departure with disappointment. "I loved Red and Yellow. You can't replace those two. It just won't be the same without them" says Craig Brandon, longtime M&M'S fan. Others are angry. "What the heck! This is how you thank your fans?" complains Jennifer Machey. And meanwhile, some people seemed confused. "Does this mean they're hiring? My grandson needs a summer job" said a man by the name of 'Bugsy'. As for the other M&M'S spokes candies – they wouldn't return our calls.

The departure of Red and Yellow as the mascots of the M&M'S brand has sparked speculation as to who will take over leading the corporate image. When asked if the company plans to promote from within or hire outside to fill the role of Red and Yellow, a company PR agent responded,



"I loved Red and Yellow. You can't replace those two. It just won't be the same without them."

Says Craig Brandon, longtime M&M's fan.

"You have to understand the position we're in now. Red and Yellow broke the mold. It's going to be very hard to fill their shoes, and that's not candy-coating it." Reactions on twitter have linked to leaked images of potential mascots sporting colours like Maroon and Sea Foam. The PR agent would not comment on the leaked images at this time.

Red and Yellow have since been spotted roaming around without their iconic 'M' emblazoned candy shells on.

Perhaps it hasn't yet dawned on them that they are now naked. Whatever the case may be, one thing is for certain – the former M&M'S mascots have achieved celebrity status over the years and will surely be missed. Keep following this breaking news story as it unfolds at facebook.com/mmscanada and @mmscanada on twitter.

DUNK IT, SHAKE IT & ROLL THAT RIM

THE LIST
Neil Morton
metronews.ca

1 Terrence Ross. The Raptors rookie leapfrogged a ballboy before throwing down a one-handed dunk to cement his NBA All-Star dunk contest title. The best part of the win? He paid homage to Vince Carter by wearing his retro Raptors Jersey for one dunk, and the ballboy was the son of Twitter CEO Dick Costolo. Ross should have live-tweeted as he was dunking.

2 Seth MacFarlane. The stuffy, formal Oscars night is loosening up, with the no-holds-barred Seth (Family Guy) MacFarlane hosting the 85th Academy Awards this Sunday. The Academy Awards going edgier like the Golden Globes does is a good thing. Because at the end of the day, who really cares about the boring acceptance speeches?

3 Harlem Shake. The new Gangnam Style, this Internet dance phenomenon is based on an electronic dance track by DJ Baauer. Thousands of YouTube videos are being uploaded every day of people doing it, from sports teams to office workers. And unlike Gangnam, you don't have to be a great dancer. Which means I'll be all over this meme soon.

4 Pancake Manor. This Canadian YouTube music video series for kids by Billy Reid has garnered more than nine million views. Featuring puppets that educate with high energy music and humour, it's great for entertaining and tiring your preschoolers out — and giving parents a break. Go to pancakemanor.com to discover this brave new kids world.

5 Danica Patrick. In a historic sports achievement, Patrick became the first woman to win the pole position for the Daytona 500 — the Super Bowl of NASCAR. She beat the boys by posting a speed of 196.434 m.p.h., and starts alongside Jeff Gordon in the Feb. 24 race. Two words for Patrick: girl power!

6 Roll Up The Rim. Tim Hortons' latest Roll Up The Rim promotion has begun. It has become so well known that it now makes headlines each time it starts up. And it's upped the ante for this, their 27th annual event, by including 100 pre-paid MasterCards loaded with $5,000 each among the prizes. With my luck, I'll just settle for a double double.

7 Roberto Luongo. The Vancouver Canucks goalie may have the funniest, most self-deprecating Twitter account in sports @strombone1. He takes you inside the hockey world, poking fun at himself and others who take sport so seriously. A recent tweet said "Almost had him....." with a picture of Luongo giving up a goal he wasn't close to saving. LOL.

8 Twitter Hacker Club. A hamburglar hacked @burgerking's Twitter account Monday, changing the account to McDonald's profile pic. Then Tuesday, someone (reportedly the Whopper hacker) carhacked @jeep's account, saying it had been sold to Cadillac. This was quite a lesson in password security for both companies, but they did pick up plenty of new followers with the attention.

9 The Junos. The music machine that is Canadian pop star Carly Rae Jepsen picked up more award nominations this week, this time five to lead the pack for the 2013 Juno Awards, which take place in Regina on April 21. Heck, she got more than the boy who discovered her and launched her career with a tweet, the Biebs. The whole world has her number now.

10 Big Brother Canada. From a small-town elementary teacher in Nova Scotia to a T.O. socialite to a Calgary firefighter who likes to party, the first season of Big Brother Canada has all the makings of great Canadian reality TV — and evictions. The show debuts Feb. 27 on Slice. I know I'll be tuning in to check out the hijinks.

Mexican carpooling

Daily commute inspires art project

For most of us, riding on the back of a pickup truck would be a once-off trip, but for construction workers in Monterrey, Mexico, it's part of a daily commute. This bird's eye view of labourers is the theme of photographer Alejandro Cartagena's project Car Poolers, exhibited at Los Angeles' Kopeikin Gallery from Feb. 23 to April 6.

METRO WORLD NEWS

Q&A with photographer

'Simple, honest, life'

How did this photo project come about?
In the summer of 2011, I started going once or twice a week to the same spot — an overpass on Monterrey's Highway 85 going southbound to San Pedro Garza Garcia — to photograph these workers on their way to work. I would stay for two hours and get just a couple of images I liked; the speed of the trucks made it difficult to get clear shots. After a year, I've arrived with around 120 good images.

How has the reaction to your photos been?
Some people in Mexico have found them humorous, others provocative, but most are very intrigued at the choice of viewpoint to portray the issue.

What issue is that?
The social and economic kind. If these guys would go on the bus route, it would be too expensive for them, since there are no proper mass low-cost transportation systems. I hope one can reflect on how people's resilience helps them maintain hope of a better life in a country filled with social, political and violent issues.

In three words, how would you describe your photos?
Simple, honest, life.

Dwayne Johnson offers to hunt down a few criminals in exchange for less jail time for his son in Snitch. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

The Rock cooks a stinker

Snitch. It's dealers vs. Dwayne Johnson in this movie, with a heavy handed look at America's War on Drugs policy

Richard: Mark, Snitch isn't a bad movie, but it is a miscast one. As charismatic as The Rock... er ... Johnson is, his physicality gets in the way. The character is a determined regular Joe willing to go to any lengths to help his son. But how much more effective would it have been if he didn't resemble a cop who could crash the drug dealers he's working with between his muscular thumb and forefinger?

Mark: I wouldn't say it was miscast, but that it was too obviously cast. Your idea of casting against type, as an everyman rather than an action hero, is a tantalizing one. I'm imagining how much more interesting a movie it would be with, say, Ryan Gosling, or even Paul Giamatti. The real question, however, is: when Susan Sarandon and Barry Pepper are support characters in a Dwayne Johnson movie, is this one of the signs of the apocalypse?

RC: Ha! I thought Pepper was OK but you could almost see Sarandon reaching for the paycheque. She has seven movies coming out this year and seems to have wedged this one in as she ran from set to set. Perhaps the movie's message that the "War on Drugs" needs to find a new plan of attack appealed to her, but she's playing this one as a character straight out of Central Casting. What did you think of Jon Bernthal as the ex-con who gives The Rock a hand. Loved him on The Walking Dead and thought he was one of the best things about this movie, even if the conclusion to his story was far fetched.

MB: Well, he was the only one in the movie who brought an element of surprise to his scenes. As far as the story goes, I liked the premise, but I thought the storytelling was kind of sloppy and sometimes it felt like scenes were missing. The violence was restrained for this kind of movie, and I'm not sure if that's a good or a bad thing. And the villains barely registered. They were mostly nasty in theory.

RC: I found the lack of violence refreshing. Given the name, the star and the idea you might have expected this to be a shoot 'em up, and it isn't. It's a father and son story with a twist.

MB: Finally! A drug movie for the whole family!

Synopsis

Dwayne Johnson is John Matthews, owner of a construction company and estranged father to Jason (Rafi Gavron). Jason falls into a Kafka-esque legal loophole when his drug-dealing best friend implicates him as a trafficker in return for a break on jail time. Under America's strict "War on Drugs" laws Jason is facing a mandatory 10-year sentence unless he gives up the name of a co-conspirator, but because he's innocent he has no one to snitch on. John gets the action underway when he says to the U.S. Attorney (Susan Sarandon), "What if I do it for him? What if I help you make arrests?" Cue the cage match between The Rock and drug dealers.

McGregor is the number one super guy

Ewan McGregor, right, loves the humour of his character in Jack the Giant Slayer. HANDOUT

Jack the Giant Slayer. Star takes on the role of a well-intentioned knight who needs a little help from his sidekick Jack

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Ewan McGregor gets his daring-do on for director Bryan Singer in Jack the Giant Slayer, playing a knight who's forthright and heroic — to a fault — as he and Jack (Nicholas Hoult) try to rescue a princess from the aforementioned giants. But McGregor's inspiration for the character may surprise you.

You look fantastic in this movie. It seems like you haven't aged in the last 10 years. What gives?
(Laughs) I don't have a secret to that, I'm afraid.

When you're presented with a forthright knight type of character, how do you approach that?
I don't know, it's a pretty understandable character. It's a sort of classic role. It's not something new, really. I just played what was on the page, really. It's very well and clearly written in the script. And I liked the humour. I thought the humour that was in the writing was very good. I like the fact that he's sort of very gung-ho but very often doesn't quite get things right, and then Jack has to come along behind him and tidy things up. Sort of like a Hong Kong Phooey type style. That cartoon was one of my main sources of research, Hong Kong Phooey.

The film very carefully walks that line of appealing to both kids and adults.
I think that's right. It lies in exactly the right place for a film that's being made for a family to watch. Very often these days you take your kids to films and there's inappropriate language or sexual jokes that are very clearly aimed for the parents. You don't want your kids seeing that, or at least I don't. But this is absolutely something that you could take your family to see and you wouldn't find yourself in any awkward moments with your kids, you know? It's a classic sort of family movie.

It's nice to see you working with your Trainspotting co-star Ewan Bremner again.
We did Black Hawk Down together and then we did another film called Perfect Sense together, so this is the fourth film that we've made together. I'm always happy to work with him because he's a great actor, Ewan. I like working with him very much. But yeah, four films we've made together now, so it'll be interesting to see what the next one is. We don't have anything planned that I know of.

Thriller

Dark Skies

Director. Scott Stewart

Stars. Keri Russell, Josh Hamilton

Freaky happenings abound in Dark Skies — a supernatural thriller about a young family that suddenly begins experiencing such disturbing events as unexplained nose bleeds and 800 birds inexplicably flying into their house. But the teeth really begin gnashing when the Barrett clan suspects the work of aliens. A loose ending may put off conventional moviegoers but filmmaker Scott Stewart crafts a pretty creepy story — even if it jumps a bit of logic.
STEVE GOW

Drama

Tower

Director. Kazik Radwanski

Stars. Derek Bogart

This debut feature from TIFF short-film vet Kazik Radwanski is, more than anything else, an exercise in style; Radwanski films his subject, 34-year old Derek, in tight close-ups, and tight close-ups only. It's a clever conceit to bring the viewers into Derek's myopic, man-child point of view — but wears thin after 80-minutes of watching him willfully flush opportunities down the toilet. The frustration one feels while watching Derek's self-sabotage is only compounded by Radwanski's unwillingness to let us out of his world.

Is stress affecting your love life?

Increase Libido and Energy with Maca!

Between work, family, household tasks and the thousand other things you're responsible for, is "not tonight dear" becoming your motto? Stress often goes hand in hand with a plummeting sex drive. Stress affects your hormones and if they are out of kilter, not only is your sex life affected but it can also lead to adrenal fatigue with the accompanying symptoms of cravings, fatigue, weight gain, poor sleep, moodiness and more…

When you feel stressed your adrenal glands kick into high gear and begin to enlarge. In 2003, Spanish scientists reported in the journal Phytotherapy Research that Peruvian maca can actually shrink overworked adrenal glands.

Ultimate Maca Energy™ provides the nutrients to support your adrenal glands and give you back the energy you need to tackle life and promote a healthy libido. Ultimate Maca Energy is high in B vitamins, amino acids, antioxidants and magnesium. These nutrients provide the support you need to increase energy, relax tense muscles and reduce stress levels.

Look for Ultimate Maca Energy Platinum XP™ liquid and Ultimate Maca Energy in powder or capsules. Each of these has undergone the gelatinization process for the highest potency, optimal absorption and superior results. Ultimate Maca Energy and Ultimate Maca Energy Platinum XP are certified organic and traditionally sundried.

- ✓Improve Libido
- ✓Reduce Stress
- ✓Increase Energy
- ✓Improve mental clarity and more…

Ultimate Maca Users agree….

"…increase in libido…my anxiety and irritability diminished … I am sleeping better and have much more energy…moods improved …increased energy both mentally and physically… …noticed the difference within a few weeks… more mental clarity…life is good!"

Oscar night. Canadians in the running at this year's Academy Awards

Montreal's Kim Nguyen is nominated in the best foreign language film category for Rebelle. HANDOUT

Kim Nguyen of Montreal is nominated in the best foreign-language film category for Rebelle (War Witch). The French-language drama is a harrowing look at the lives of child soldiers in Sub-Saharan Africa. Nguyen penned the story over the course of a decade and shot it in Congo with a cast that included several local first-time actors.

Toronto composer Mychael Danna is up for best original score and best original song for Life of Pi. Danna spent nearly a year working on the score for the film, based on the Booker-winning novel by Yann Martel. Danna had previously collaborated with Pi director Ang Lee on 1997's The Ice Storm and 1999's Ride with the Devil.

Yan England of Montreal is nominated for best live-action short for Henry, about an elderly pianist. England has said it's a tribute to his late grandfather, who suffered from Alzheimer's disease. The filmmaker has been acting in English and French since he was eight and financed Henry out of his own pocket.

Toronto-bred producer Mino Jarjoura is up for best live-action short for Asad, about a Somalian boy torn between life as a budding fisherman and the temptation to become a pirate. Jarjoura says he and director Bryan Buckley wanted to capture the indomitable spirit of Somalian people, which they discovered while making a short documentary for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in 2010.

Montreal-based producer Ariel Nasr is up for best live-action short film for Buzhkashi Boys, about two Afghan boys who long to professionally play the country's brutal horse-polo sport. It was shot in Kabul in February 2011 and produced through the non-profit Afghan Film Project.

Jim Erickson of Salt Spring Island, B.C., is in the running for best production design for Lincoln. He was previously nominated for There Will Be Blood. After 30 years working in Hollywood, Erickson has said he's now ready to retire.

Rating the hosts

The choice of Family Guy creator Seth MacFarlane may seem like yet another attempt by the older-skewing Oscars to appeal to the kids, but he actually has a surprising tendency toward Old Hollywood style. At parties thrown at his house, MacFarlane is even known to sing standards backed by a big band. While the jury's still out on MacFarlane's performance, we thought we'd see what he has to measure up to from the last few years' Awards.

NED EHRBAR
scene@metronews.ca

2009: Hugh Jackman

The Australian charmer — who happens to be a nominee for best actor this year — turned in the hosting performance to beat the year Slumdog Millionaire won. His opening song-and-dance number was the standout, but Broadway veteran Jackman proved he's an all-around talent.

2010: Alec Baldwin and Steve Martin

The likeable comic actors relied heavily on their own charm, but it wasn't enough to save the show. With stale jokes and awkward delivery, their performance felt too much like an ad for their equally disappointing 2009 film It's Complicated.

2011: James Franco and Anne Hathaway

As we remarked during this train wreck, "Apparently there is something James Franco can't do." This brazen attempt at pulling in younger viewers turned out to be a disaster, with current nominee Hathaway seemingly abandoned by Franco, who seemed to have — wisely — given up on the endeavor before it began.

2012: Billy Crystal

After the Franco/Hathaway disaster, the Academy went back to standby Crystal, who hosted his ninth Oscars. But the funnyman's schtick maybe went too old-fashioned, as his bits were generally panned as hokey and out of touch. Case in point: while many in that precious younger demographic might not necessarily know Crystal was dressing up as Sammy Davis Jr. in one bit, they do know what blackface is.

The odds-on Oscar favourites

Academy Awards. Gold Derby is tracking the chances for all the nominees

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

With odds of four to one, Steven Spielberg's Lincoln is still the favourite to win the big prize of best picture at the Academy Awards Sunday, according to Gold Derby, which tracks the chances for Oscar nominees.

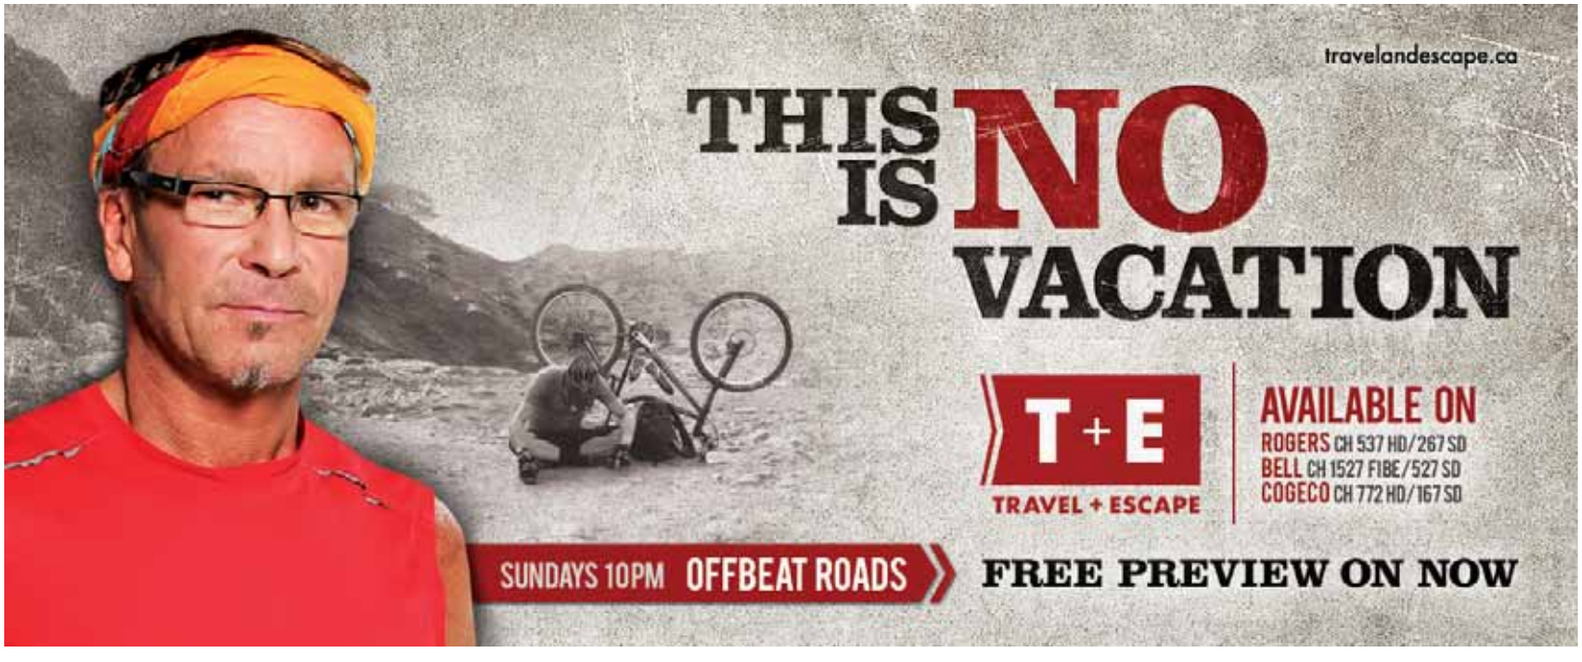
That's despite the surge of support — and wins at other awards shows — for Ben Affleck's Argo, which started when Affleck was left out of the best director race, which Spielberg is also most likely to take, with 12 to five odds.

In the acting categories, it's no surprise to anyone that Lincoln star Daniel Day-Lewis is most likely on his way to becoming the first three-time best actor winner in Oscar History, with a 39 per cent chance of victory.

The only nominee with better odds of scoring a trophy is Anne Hathaway, nominated for best supporting actress for Les Misérables.

The best actress race is much more interesting, with Silver Linings Playbook star Jennifer Lawrence (33 per cent) edging out Zero Dark Thirty's Jessica Chastain (30 per cent). Amour star Emmanuelle Riva, thought to be something of a potential spoiler, currently has 12 to one odds of winning. Just for comparison, our predictions when the nominations were announced last month had Lincoln, Spielberg, Day-Lewis and Chastain winning. We'll see how right we are come Sunday evening.

Steven Spielberg's Lincoln is the favourite to win best picture with four to one odds. HANDOUT



Arrested Development Wiigs out

As we anxiously count down days until the new season of Arrested Development is released on Netflix, a new tidbit of information came out today that made us even more impatient.

It turns out Kristen Wiig will guest star in the new episodes of Arrested Development.

Even better, Wiig will play a young Lucille Bluth. We can't imagine a better actress to play the nutty, vodka-drinking, cold matriarch than Wiig. Maybe we'll see Wiig's young Lucille oddly intimate relationship with her son Buster. Does young Lucille also roll her eyes at Gob's magic, err, illusions? Will young Lucille also harass daughter Lindsay about her weight?

Vulture, who first reported the news, says that Wiig and Jason Bateman, who plays Michael Bluth on the show, are presumably friends after having co-starred in the comedies Extract and Paul.

The new season premieres on Netflix in May and will also guest star Seth Rogen, John Slattery, Ben Schwartz, Chris Diamantopoulos, Conan O'Brien, Isla Fisher and Terry Crews.

Layton bio more than just politics as usual

Love story. Personal life of Jack and Olivia revisited in new made-for-TV movie

SHANE GIBSON
Metro in Winnipeg

Jack Layton's story is one Laszlo Barna said he knew needed to be told as he watched the nation mourn his death.

The executive producer of Smilin' Jack: The Jack Layton Story, which was shot in Winnipeg in 2012, said the tale transcends politics.

"Some people think this is a partisan film, but when you bury someone, it's time to put those labels aside," he told Metro on set, noting Layton's great grandfather was a Father of Confederation, and his father sat as a Tory MP.

"It's a story of this kid who came originally from a political family — not NDPers — but a political family.

"This film is about a great Canadian."

Layton died in August, 2011 at the age of 61 after a battle with cancer. His death came just a few months after he led his NDP through a spring election, capturing a party-record 103 seats and becoming Canada's official Opposition.

While the film will follow much of the campaign and his political career, Barna said it would also delve into Layton's personal life, including his marriage to fellow NDP MP Olivia Chow.

"It's a love story ... about when he met Olivia, and how they got along together," he said, noting Chow lived with her mother throughout their marriage, which makes for some of the film's more comical moments. "Not a lot of marriages survive that."

The role of Layton is played by Rick Roberts and Chow is portrayed by broadcaster Sook-Yin Lee. Both actors are spending upwards of two hours in the make-up chair during the shoot to make sure they look just like the couple.

"I age through three decades being Olivia Chow," said Lee. "It helps me get into character, because when I look in the mirror and see the transformation, I'm no longer physically me."

The role is an important one for Lee, whose own sister was diagnosed with cancer a little over a year ago.

"Living with cancer is an extremely painful and distressing experience," she said. "It's something that was very close to me."

Barna hopes the final cut of the movie will inspire the next Jack Layton.

In memory

"I want people to remember (Jack) and the example he set as someone who served the community. We need a young generation of people to get involved and engaged ... like Jack did."

Cancelled tour. Born This Way singer says post surgery that her fans gave her strength

Lady Gaga appreciates her fans. GETTY IMAGES

Lady Gaga says she's had surgery to fix her hip.

The 26-year-old singer posted on her blog late Wednesday that she had hip surgery and it "happened so fast." She cancelled her Born This Way Ball tour last week.

She thanked her fans in the post, saying they gave her "a lot of strength." Lady Gaga said that as she was wheeled to surgery, she reflected on her fans. She wrote: "Sometimes you are so brave that it terrifies me. I wonder how it's even possible."

Lady Gaga cancelled more than 20 dates on the remainder of her tour, which began last April. She originally postponed four dates last week after experiencing difficulties during her concert in Montreal. She explained to fans on Twitter that she'd hurt herself while performing some time ago. OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Rihanna and Chris Brown

They found love in a hopeless place?

So much for those breakup rumours. Rihanna is celebrating her 25th birthday this week by escaping to Hawaii with Chris Brown by her side. The birthday girl posted a photo to Instagram of her smiling self perched on Brown's lap in the back of a limo.

They were also spotted seaside in Honolulu, according to E! News. "Chris was leading Rihanna by the hand," a source says of their brief beach walk. "She was puffing on something as she walked and seemed very relaxed and happy. Her hair was blowing and she twirled around. She looked totally free and like she was really enjoying her birthday. Chris was protective and made sure to hold her hand as they walked."

Diane Lane and Josh Brolin to divorce

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

After eight years of marriage, Diane Lane and Josh Brolin are over.

A representative for the couple released this curt announcement to Us Weekly: "Diane Lane and Josh Brolin have decided to end their marriage. It was a mutual decision. It is very amicable. It's not ugly, it's just over."

The couple have no children.

What was it, Diane? Was it when he was arrested on a misdemeanor charge of domestic battery in 2004? Or the two public intoxication charges, one in 2008 and the latest on New Year's Day in Santa Monica? Did you just have enough of the Brolin drunk charm?

And if Brolin's rage issues were that bad when you were "happily married," what in the world will happen when he's drowning his sorrows over the split? If I were the owner of his nearby dive bar, I'd lock my doors.

The LaBeouf rebuff

Shia LaBeouf has exited what would have been his Broadway debut — in a revival of Orphans alongside Alec Baldwin — less than a month before previews were to begin, but there's been plenty of drama since he quit.

LaBeouf, who is rather new to Twitter, decided to use the social-networking site to publish emails between himself, Baldwin, director Daniel Sullivan and co-star Tom Sturridge that all suggest some sort of squabble between LaBeouf and Baldwin that precipitated his exit. "I'm too old for disagreeable situations," Sullivan writes in an email to LaBeouf. "You're one hell of a great actor. Alec is who he is. You are who you are. You two are incompatible. I should have known it. This one will haunt me. You tried to warn me. You said you were a different breed. I didn't get it."

Party bites worthy of an Academy Award

Canapes may sound stuffy, but they actually are the ultimate in ease when it comes to party food. Plus, they look great and can be combined in endless ways to suit any taste.

So here is simple formula for making canapes: divide them into four components — bases, spreads, toppings and garnishes. For each canape, all you do is select one item from each category, then assemble. And the easiest way to assemble enough for a party is to set out all of your ingredients (clustered by category), then just start selecting and building.

If you're planning on an Oscars viewing party, you might even consider turning the making of the canapes into a pre-party. Set out everything on the counter, pour some wine and invite a few guests to come early and help assemble (and sample, of course).

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Each spread recipe makes enough to top 24 canapes. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bases

- 24 multigrain crackers
- 24 thin slices of seedless cucumber
- 24 toasted baguette slices
- 24 purchased phyllo cups (found in the grocer's freezer section)

Spreads

Zesty Barbecue
- 3 tbsp barbecue sauce
- 2 tbsp red pepper jelly
- 1/4 cup sour cream
- Splash of hot sauce

1. In bowl, stir ingredients.

Orange Sweet Potato
- 1 sweet potato, microwaved until fork-tender
- 2 tbsp orange marmalade
- 1 tbsp cider vinegar
- Salt, black pepper

1. Peel potato and mash in bowl. Stir in marmalade and vinegar. Season with salt and pepper.

Toppers

- Small cooked and peeled shrimp
- Shredded cooked chicken
- Halved cherry tomatoes
- Crab meat
- Small wedges of manchego cheese

Garnishes

- Shaved Parmesan cheese
- Sliced green and black olives
- Sliced hot peppers (such as piri piri or Peppadew)
- Sliced scallions

To assemble the canapes, arrange the bases on a large serving tray. Top each with a small dollop of one of the spreads. Press one of the topping choices into the spread, then finish each with a garnish.

With the Oscar's awarded this Sunday, here are my picks for the right booze to match with each of the best picture nominees.

Les Misérables
Victor Hugo was French, loved Paris, and Paris loves the wines of Bordeaux. Go Right Bank, where merlot rules and the wines are softer and easier drinking.

Zero Dark Thirty
Osama bin Laden may have abstained, but his American hunters probably enjoyed a shot of Bourbon. Try a robust, single barrel version.

Life of Pi
I'd go with a sweeter white riesling from Germany. It likes pie.

Django Unchained
This spaghetti western, à la Tarantino, deserves a nice Italian red made with the sangiovese grape from Tuscany's Chianti region.

Lincoln
Daniel Day-Lewis is a Brit, and Lincoln had more than enough reasons to take a drink. Together they make a strong case for a full-bodied English (or U.S.) ale.

Argo
Though it's sour grapes for the Academy for leaving its helmsman off the best director list, I'm betting Ben Affleck will be drinking some bubbly, like Moët & Chandon's non-vintage Brut Imperial champagne ($60.75 to $65), when his flick wins best picture.

Toronto Blue Jays catchers, from left, J.P. Arencibia, Josh Thole and Henry Blanco chat on Thursday before a drill during baseball spring training in Dunedin, Fla. NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Arencibia OK not catching Dickey

MLB. Jays No. 1 catcher wants to catch knuckleballer but says it's not up to him

Historically, not much importance should be given to playing time or statistics at spring training.

So while starting catcher J.P. Arencibia will be behind the plate for R.A. Dickey's first start in a Blue Jays uniform on Monday against the Red Sox, it's likely that by the time the regular season starts, Henry Blanco or Josh Thole will be his personal catcher.

This had the makings of the Jays' first true controversy of the spring, but Arencibia quickly tried to head it off.

"In this day and age, nobody catches 162 games," Arencibia said philosophically. "I'll be back there four out of five, regardless who it is. It's just more finding what works for the team."

But when the Jays traded for Dickey, Arencibia touched bases with the knuckleballing right-hander. He asked the defending NL Cy Young winner and fellow Nashville resident to play catch a couple of times per week so he could get used to the unpredictable dancing of Dickey's bread-and-butter pitch.

Arencibia has continued to work with him in bullpen sessions and they are both on Team USA at the upcoming WBC, though Joe Mauer is the No. 1 for the American team.

"I've shown that I can catch (the knuckler), I know I can catch it," Arencibia said. "For me, I want to play every game and I feel like I could play every one. But that's the nature of the game. That's not my decision."

Most durable starting catchers are behind the plate for about 130 games out of the 162 in the regular season. Thus, if Dickey makes his 34-36 starts and if another catcher is assigned to corral his knuckleball every five days, then Arencibia claims he is philosophical about the possibility.

There is a side issue here. The Jays have sold out opening night at the Rogers Centre on April 2 with Dickey pitching. And manager John Gibbons said on Wednesday that if the decision is to give Dickey a personal catcher, then that's the lineup they will go with.

"Opening day's special, obviously," Arencibia admitted. "You always want to be a part of opening day. Again, selfishly, you could be worried about it. If that's the best lineup for that day, that's the best lineup for that day."

Burke returns to Ducks as scout

"Any time you can add a person of his quality to your staff, it makes your organization better," Ducks GM Bob Murray said in a statement. "We've had success working together before and look forward to doing it again."

Raps get guard Telfair from Suns

The Toronto Raptors acquired Phoenix point guard Sebastian Telfair ahead of Thursday's 3 p.m. trade deadline, according to multiple reports.

The Raptors sent centre Hamed Haddadi — who never played for Toronto — and a conditional second-round pick to the Suns.

The deal gives Toronto a third point guard, joining Kyle Lowry and John Lucas.

The 27-year-old Telfair is averaging 6.0 points and 2.5 assists this season.

Homan's unbeaten streak ends at Scotties

Ontario skip Rachel Homan makes a shot against Team Manitoba on Thursday in Kingston. RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The battle of unbeaten rinks at the Scotties Tournament of Hearts on Thursday delivered drama, back-and-forth scoring swings and plenty of excitement.

Manitoba's Jennifer Jones emerged triumphant after a stellar display of shotmaking gave her a 9-7 win, a guaranteed playoff berth and left Ontario's Rachel Homan with her first loss of the tournament.

Jones shot 93 per cent and always had an answer for her opponent. Homan was buoyed by the crowd in Kingston, but it wasn't enough to prevent her from falling to 7-1.

"I predicted that we were going to lose a couple of games — it's nationals and it's tough," Ottawa's Homan said.

Jones (8-0) is focused on qualifying for the 1-2 Page playoff game and said she's not really concerned about maintaining a perfect record.

"We had one loss in our provincials and it kind of gave us a kick in the pants," Jones said. "Right now I feel like we're playing well and we don't need that kick in the pants. So hopefully that's true."

Jones took the lead with a pair in the eighth end and added a steal of one in the ninth.

Top 3

After 13 draws, Jennifer Jones leads at 8-0, Rachel Homan is alone in second place at 7-1 and Team Canada's Heather Nedohin is next at 6-2. All three rinks were scheduled to play Thursday night.

- Round-robin play continues through Friday.

No mixed messages from Leafs coach

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Adam Proteau
toronto@metronews.ca

If there's one thing the Toronto Maple Leafs have been known for in recent years, it's not being known for any one thing. One day, the team would act as if a playoff spot were a priority (see Kessel, Phil and Gerber, Martin and Bismol, Pepto). The next, it would look more toward a long-term and longer-overdue youth movement. You never quite knew what to expect at any single moment.

But under new GM Dave Nonis and new(ish) head coach Randy Carlyle, the Leafs have been excellent about establishing and sticking to a new tone — one where hard work is rewarded with ice time, regardless of any individual player's contract — and Toronto is reaping the benefits on the ice and in the standings.

From the day training camp began, Carlyle's message to players has been simple: You work hard, you do things I want you to do, and you'll get your minutes. Now you have to understand, many NHL coaches and teams say the same thing, but for one reason or another, they eventually dole out more shifts to players who haven't always earned them.

However, think of what Carlyle has done already this season. He buried Tim Connolly and his $4.75-million cap hit in the minors. He and management ate $1.5 million of Matthew Lombardi's $3.5-million salary in a trade to open up roster room for a more deserving youngster.

Carlyle staying true to his word

From the day training camp began, Carlyle's message to players has been simple: You work hard, you do things I want you to do, and you'll get your minutes.

And since the season began, he has sat out veteran defencemen Mike Komisarek (salary: $4.5 million), John-Michael Liles ($3.875 million) and Cody Franson ($1.2 million) in favour of far less accomplished blue-liners Mike Kostka, Mark Fraser and Korbinian Holzer.

There has even been one period of Leafs hockey this season in which enforcer Colton Orr played more minutes than Phil Kessel. Take a moment to let that sentence sink in. Re-read it if you have to. You probably didn't believe it the first time. But as shocking as it is, it is oddly refreshing. And it underscores what Carlyle has been preaching all along.

That message — and its strict enforcement — has created a real sense of competition in the Leafs dressing room. It has given hope to those players starving for it and instilled a healthy fear into the hearts and minds of previously comfortable Toronto veterans.

That's what the Leafs have needed and what the team has lacked. No wonder they're responding.

NHL

Leafs roll past sagging Sabres

James van Riemsdyk scored twice to power the Toronto Maple Leafs past the struggling Buffalo Sabres 3-1 on Thursday night, spoiling the NHL head-coaching debut of Ron Rolston.

Rolston, who until Wednesday was the head coach of the AHL's Rochester Americans, was named the Sabres interim coach following the club's stunning decision to fire Lindy Ruff.

Ruff, who had played 10 seasons for Buffalo, had been behind the club's bench since 1997 and was the NHL's longest-tenured head coach.

The Sabres (6-11-1) have now dropped three straight and 5-of-6.

Van Riemsdyk's power-play goal at 14:28 of the third — his team-leading 11th — gave Toronto some much-needed breathing room after Buffalo goalie Ryan Miller stoned Van Riemsdyk with a fabulous glove save earlier on the power play.

Cyberbullying part of the game

Social media.
Pro athletes deal with online attacks in different ways

Canadian tennis player Rebecca Marino's revelations that she's been bullied via social media has shone a light on how professional athletes react to what's said about them on Twitter and Facebook.

Marino said Wednesday she felt overwhelmed at times by barbs directed at her following a loss.

"The hurtful ones kind of stick with you a little bit more," Marino told reporters Wednesday during a conference call. "I was getting some messages saying I should go die, that I should go burn in hell, that I'm a dumb-ass, that I'm an idiot, that I lost them money.

"Social media is actually a really important part of our society and there can be a lot of good that comes out of it. I don't want to discredit social media. Personally, I find it can be quite distracting."

The 22-year-old from Vancouver announced Wednesday that she's stepping away from tennis, but that cyberbullying was not the primary reason.

A loss of passion for the pro tour and recent struggles with depression are the reasons, though Marino did say she's ignoring social media for now.

Many professional athletes have large numbers of opinionated followers on social media. Their actions in and out of their respective games are dissected on Internet chat rooms and message boards.

Toronto Maple Leafs forward Joffrey Lupul, who has almost 165,000 followers on Twitter, says it's important to keep perspective and have a thick skin when he scrolls through comments.

"You've got to realize there's millions, probably billions, of people on Twitter, so not all of them are good people who are going to say good things," Lupul said in Toronto on Wednesday.

Toronto Blue Jay Adam Loewen knows all about being the subject of virtual chatter after switching from promising pitcher to position player because of injuries and control issues. He's learned not to look in the social-media mirror.

"I think as a young athlete that can really get under your skin and I've learned along the way to just not even go there, not even look at it," said Loewen, 28.

"Because it never helped. I'd read what fans were saying and ask myself how I can accommodate them, rather than be myself and control what I can control." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Her car led the field to green, then Danica Patrick never gave herself a chance to race for the win at Daytona.

She's saving that all-out push for the Daytona 500.

Patrick had an easy choice in her first race since winning the pole for The Great American Race. She played it safe and stayed back Thursday, keeping her pole position for the Daytona 500.

All Patrick needed to do was keep her car intact to preserve the top spot for Sunday's Daytona 500. She started on the pole for the first 150-mile Budweiser Duel before she faded into the field and finished 17th out of 23 cars.

"I suppose there's a sense of relief" she kept the pole, Patrick said. "But at the same point in time, I'm a race-car driver, and it's not fun to have to protect and be careful and be cautious and drop back at times."

Patrick was nowhere near the four-lap sprint to the finish that saw Kevin Harvick hold off Greg Biffle for the win.

Patrick became the first woman in history to win a pole in NASCAR's Sprint Cup series. Team owner Gene Haas even suggested — perhaps, jokingly — that Patrick start and park after two laps and save the car.

Horoscopes

Aries
March 21 - April 20
Rules are meant to be broken, especially if they were made in someone else's favour. The bottom line is that your own needs come first. If that means going too far in some people's eyes, well, so be it.

Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Not everyone is as careful and conscientious as you and there is a real possibility that a mistake has been made. It may not be a serious one but it could affect you in some way, so check other people's work.

Gemini
May 22 - June 21
There is one particular thing that needs your full and undivided attention today. You know what it is and you know you will have to focus hard if you are going to succeed. Don't let anything distract you.

Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Honesty is essential, even if it means that a long-standing friendship is put to the test. You may be tempted to avoid the truth to spare someone's feelings but in the long-term it will do more harm than good.

Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Someone needs to keep a clear head today and that someone has to be you. Others may get emotional but you must insist on common sense all the way down the line, for their sake as well as your own.

Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
There are so many changes going on that you probably can't keep track of them all. Don't worry. Most of them will work in your favour. One warning though: Don't make promises you may not be able to keep.

Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Certain duties may be a pain but you know they have to be done. Even with its petty annoyances this could be a positive time for you. Show people that you can be trusted to work on your own.

Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Something you had a hard time getting your head around yesterday will be as clear as crystal today. No doubt you will mentally kick yourself for being so dense but don't worry about it. You're allowed an off day now and again.

Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
The first step in resolving a problem is to admit that it exists, so stop making excuses and face the reality of your present situation. The moment you do that is the moment the answers start coming.

Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Something is worrying you but you can't put your finger on what it might be. Whatever it is the planets suggest it's not worth the effort, so focus on more pleasant thoughts. Don't let worry become a habit.

Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
A new path is beckoning and all you have to do is put one foot in front of the other and start walking. Just do it, otherwise you'll find all sorts of reasons to stay where you are.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you have an important decision to make today, you must take your time and get it right. If people press you to decide right away you can bet there is more in it for them than there is for you.
